The first time History mentions a region in the western of Cuba –Guaniguanico- was in the earlier 1510’s, where historians highlighted the chieftains’ warm and hospitable character, who welcomed shipwreck-crew survivors during the conquering period of Central-America. Since then, and even when the native inhabitants disappeared from this lands, Pinar del Río shows lonely and altruist before the visitor’s eyes. Nowadays, its population of about 592,851 inhabitants welcomes visitors to a region that always surprises showing its best attractions from one end to the other. The province locates in the Cuba’s westernmost region. Guaniguanico Mountain Range is the main geographical area that possesses the country’s 11% of river basin. The province’s soil is mainly sandy and the average temperature is 25.3 C. El Valle de Viñales (Viñales Valley) was declared National Park in 1999 and Wold Heritage, Cultural Landscape, by UNESCO in December of the same year. It also possesses the condition of National Monument and the recognition of thousands of fans who visit it every year. Visitors find at this place impressive landscapes that are discovered by themselves through hiking, horse riding and excursions to cavern systems, such as the Gran Caverna de Santo Tomás (the Santo Tomás’ Great Cavern) or the Cuevas del Indio y José Miguel. Currently canopy has become into an attraction, a journey over the top of the high pines that cover the land. Pinar del Río is a land of peasants, humble people very attached to their roots, who keep alive centuries of traditions visible on their popular guateques (peasant parties), typical country celebrations enlivened by country chants and duets. These parties always develop in an environment of a native food: grill-roasted pork, congrí, tostones (green plantain chips) yucca with garlic sauce... and drinks like the well-known Guayabita del Pinar that is only manufactured here in a craftsmanship way. Inspired on our peasants’ traditions is develop the Ruta del Tabaco (the Tobacco Route) a tour which begins from the hands of a veguero (tobacco grower) until the elaboration of the exquisite puros by the experts. These men’s and women’s work passion give birth to a genuine product of our region that has placed us on the top of the world’s best cigars. The Guanahacabibes peninsula is located on the westernmost end of the province, Sandino municipality, which extension is 1.060 km² and its especial features place it as Biosphere Reserve because of the remarkable environmental significance. Nowadays, it represents the safest area in Cuba for the reproduction of three type of sea turtle: green turtle, loggerhead sea turtle and the hawksbill turtle, species that choose the peninsula shoreline for nesting. Forest keepers, ecologists and tourists participate every year in this unique experience which main goal is to protect these species at danger of extinction. This area possesses one of the beaches with the best sea bottoms called María La Gorda, where is located the International Diving Center with the same name which, within its main activities, encourages people to attend to the underwater event of photography “Imasub” that is held yearly. However, you cannot leave the province without visiting its natural paradies located on the northern territory: Cayo Jutías and Cayo Levisa, both cays treasure mangrove-covered areas, an exuberant barrier reef, wide fine-sand beaches and warm-green-blue waters for the enjoyment of all those who visit them. The city’s attractions are part of the options if visitors want to know more about the province. Pinar del Río city, which charming may be discovered walking through its streets, possesses a typical architecture that can be seen at its emblematic buildings such as the Milanés Theater, the Natural History Museum (Guasch Palace), the History Museum of the Province, the Wedding Palace, the Vueltabajo Hotel, and among others that are part of its intangible heritage. Pinar del Río is the right place for those who love beauty, arts and the nature caprices and even for those who just want to rest and interact with humble and hospitable inhabitants of this region sharing with them an exquisite puro and some cup of Guayabita del Pinar liquor.
