Welcome

HOLGUÍN

Holguín is a region standing out for its city's urban design, historical heritage, beaches and people. Its coast made Christopher Columbus say in 1492 “This is the most beautiful land human eyes have ever seen.” Holguín has always been extraordinary. Its geography subtlety has come to life, evidenced in surprising animals, summits defying gravitational force, poets, and warriors. It has been the cradle for great writers and native fighters like Carlos García and Julio Gran de Peralta, who joined the independence struggle against the Spanish in 1868.

This is the land of the Castro-Ruz family. Its coast, full of great beaches, will stay in visitors’ minds. Visiting this area of the island is a great way to understand the Cuban spirit, and the way of living the Caribbean. This area is, indeed, one of a kind.

Holguín province is also one of the most diversified regions in the island. Third in the country for its population, after Havana and Santiago, it has over a million inhabitants in 14 municipalities. Its territory, with 9,300.6 km², presents an heterogeneous geography. Located in the northeastern portion of Cuba, it limits to the West with Las Tunas, to the East with Guantánamo, and to the South with Santiago and Granma. Holguín is rich in mineral, like nickel, abundant in Moa and Nicaro regions.

The economic activities are based on agriculture, industry, and tourism. Its main agriculture crops are citrus fruits, tobacco and sugarcane. Holguín, the City of Parks, can be easily reached, distant 744 km from Havana, a place surrounded by mountains and the ocean. Its coasts have the best beaches in our country.
Holguín city, also known as the “City of the parks”, founded on April 4, 1565 by Captain García, Holguín is the only Cuban city whose center is marked by several parks.

There are many places of important anthropological, historical and cultural interest, together with landscapes and tourist areas in the province. Columbus considered the most beautiful land. Here are our recommendations.
